Turning the spotlight on the most recent addition to our team –

Dr. Robert Earl Wolf

Waco Bone and Joint is pleased to announce that Dr. Robert Earl Wolf, board-certified and fellowship-trained orthopaedic surgeon, is the most recent member of our practice.

An alumnus of Southwestern Medical School, Dr. Wolf continued advanced training in orthopaedic surgery as a resident at the Campbell Clinic in Memphis. Dr. Wolf was offered an American Cancer Society fellowship in orthopaedic oncology at Shands Teaching Hospital/University of Florida. Serving as an Assistant Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery at the University of Louisville, Dr. Wolf trained orthopaedic surgeons and uses the same “teaching attitude” in the care of his patients here in Waco.

Dr. Wolf brings to Waco Bone and Joint a wealth of expertise in providing treatment for a broad range of musculoskeletal conditions. Dr. Wolf has a special interest in sports medicine injuries and serves as a team physician for Baylor University. Additionally, he has extensive experience in general orthopaedic care, including areas such as joint replacement, arthroscopic surgery, and fracture care. “It brings me great pleasure to apply state-of-the-art, proven procedures to reduce pain and suffering and restore a patient to a more functional life,” says Dr. Wolf.

Dr. Wolf’s orthopaedic expertise and experience, coupled with exceptional patient care, makes him a valuable member of our team.
